Explanation:

Super Effective damage has a multiplier of 1.6x
Not Very Effective damage has a multiplier of 0.625x
"Immunity" tier damage has a multiplier of 0.390625x

Types that "dominate" another type are highlighted on the left side with white text. For example Flying does 1.6x damage to Fighting but Fighting only does 0.625x to Flying so Flying dominates Fighting and is highlighted in white in the left hand side.

Types that are "dominated" by another type are highlighted on the right side with white text. For example, Fairy only does 0.625x damage to Poison and Poison does 1.6x damage to Fairy so Fairy is dominated by Poison and is highlighted with white in the right side.

When a type dominates or is dominated but also takes or does an immunity tier of damage it is italicized and marked with a ⬆ or ⬇. For example, Dark does 1.6x damage to Psychic but only takes 0.390625x damage from Psychic so it extra dominates Psychic. To indicate this, Dark is italicized and marked with a ⬆ in the left side.

When a pokemon is dual-typed and resists with one type and is immune with another type, the resulting damage is 0.625 * 0.390625 = 0.244140625. For example, Gengar is Poison and Ghost so if you attack with Fighting you'll be doing 0.244140625x damage.
